The bedroom design was influenced by the design of Zumthor's hotel rooms in his Therme Vals hotel. The purpose of the room's design is in making the resident relax after soaking in the glamour in the rest of the spaces. It is a private place full of comfort, airy, and balanced with white. The bright colors calm the eyes and make them rest on clear and sharp, geometrically defined elements. The edges of marble furniture make one's gaze easily glide across the lines of the room. This sharp geometry is broken in the seating area where round furniture and carpet were used, as well as cylindrical lighting, making the harmony flow.

For a touch of luxury, we added a graceful chandelier in the center. The statement pieces which upscale the aesthetical value of the bedroom are most certainly works of art from Danijela Gruban's Entropy collection. The paintings give a break to the monotony, but are a harmonious part of the setting and are an exquisite fit with the subtle linear lighting. These art pieces correspond beautifully with our Symphony floorstanding speakers, which enhance the quality of the room atmosphere enriching it with music. They embody elegance and grace, achieving complete satisfaction and luxury. After hours of work in the home office, there's a jacuzzi providing relaxation accompanied with a tall glass of wine before bed.

As working from home and flexible hours enter our schedule in modern times, so do the adaptable home offices find themselves of vital importance in our spaces. It is a perfect place to think and create, and resting our eyes on The Entropy collection pieces of art lets our minds rest. Everything is clear and simple, with a lot of natural light, which has never been more important. We've incorporated subtle hanging lamps which illuminate the workspace beautifully at evening hours. Work can also mean comfort and the lounge chair provides just that. It is our belief that satisfaction in the job leads to work perfection and nothing says it better than The Moscow Flat's home office interior design.

The bathroom of this bedroom is in contrast in relation to it. It is adorned with cutting-edge furniture of modern and bold details, adorned with gold. Each of the selected pieces from Boca do Lobo's Lapiaz collection is a white canvas painted into luxury. Produced using the finest veneers, gold leaf, and hand-cut mirrors, the furniture brings a unification of the color-reduced bathroom elements. The aesthetic of the space lies in the tonal contrast between black, white, and gold, leaving a significant mark on the observer. The lavishness and abundance of the bathroom stem from the attention given to details and pronounced pieces. The golden details make a connection to the interior of the living room assembling the design into a harmonious whole.
