

The Saint Tropez Flat

by Formvision

What was once a humble fishing village of St. Tropez is now known as an exclusive, stylish and upscale resort town. When we think of the aesthetic this place carries, images of art, luxury, and sun-drenched scenery spring to mind, with its mesmerizing blue water and warm sandy tones everywhere you look, adding to the allure of a small French town.

The idea of something so simple being turned into a luxurious place of living was exactly the motive behind creating The Saint-Tropez Flat. It is designed in a modern manner, containing French architectural elements and practical space solutions.

This project proves that a living space can exude both comfort and luxury no matter the size, throwing light at the importance of quality architectural planning. The chosen colours are beige, black and white. Using light to its advantage, the flat is full of neutrals and added contrasts to give definition to space, contributing to dynamics of the elements.

The geometry of the flat is broken in using soft-edge Covet Group furniture pieces that blend in with the nature of the flat perfectly, provide comfort and elevate the look giving it a whim of luxury. While on the topic of luxury, the bespoke Symphony Luxury Speakers, positioned in the living room, balance out the muted colours with their golden details. They create harmony and make us appreciate and enjoy in both in the visual aesthetics and the music that permeates the entire space. The travertine can be seen all along the flat, from floor to ceiling, making the rooms look clean and spacious. The hard material in combination with a pale colour subtly gives off the feeling of power and remains in consonance with the space. Apart from its adaptability to the seaside lifestyle, the primary purpose of its design is in functionality, beautifying the resident's life at any time of the year. On that note, the vertical fireplace radiates both warmth and leisure.

The Saint-Tropez flat is a combination of comfort and luxury, of glorified natural elements and well thought-out architectural planning. It's a sight for sore eyes and a sublimely planned living space for those appreciative of details, who like living life to the fullest.
